

Youth Influencer Award

Noah Martin

Noah Martin, recipient of a 2022 Youth Influencer Award, is an example of exceptional leadership skills and commitment to his community.

Noah is motivated by his desire to foster positive change and support those in need. Committed to promoting health and wellness amongst youth in the community, Noah is the chair of the Leduc Youth Council, and helps organize events like the Youth Wellness Symposium and Rock the Rails Festival. He also serves as university student representative on the Leduc Community Drug Action Committee and was appointed as Leduc representative on the Greater Edmonton Health Advisory Council, where he is able to actively influence health care policies in the community.

Noah loves physical activity and played rugby all through high school, representing Alberta at the western nationals. He now shares his love of the sport by mentoring new players as a coach for the LA Crude rugby club. Noah is also entering his second year of kinesiology at the University of Alberta, majoring in adapted physical activity. An advocate for innovation in health care, he hopes to contribute to research on rehabilitation medicine and neurological conditions.
